

Agatha Christie was born in 1890 and died in 1976. She wrote a lot of very popular detective novels. She is – along with William Shakespeare – the best selling writer of all time. Her play, The Mousetrap, holds the record for the longest run in the world. The first performance in London was on 25 November 1952, and it is still running in the same theatre after more than 20,000 performances.

Agatha Christie did not go to school. During the First World War she worked in a hospital dispensary. There she learnt about chemicals and poisons. This knowledge became very useful to her in her later career of detective-story writer.

She was married twice. Her first husband was Colonel Archibald Christie. She divorced in 1928 and married an archaeologist. She helped him in his excavation of historical sites in Syria and Iraq. This activity gave her some detective skills.
