

Emmeline Goulden married a lawyer, Richard Pankhurst, who believed that women should have the same rights as men. In 1903, after her husband had died, she and her eldest daughter Christabel founded the Women's Social and Political Union, the 'suffragettes'.

Emmeline Pankhurst and her daughter Christabel

They and their supporters interrupted political meetings, smashed shop windows, and did all they could to win women the right to vote. When they were arrested they went on hunger strike.

When war came in 1914, Emmeline and Christabel urged women to work for their country.

Christabel escaped to Paris in 1912 so that she was free to organize the campaign. They became quite ruthless, and even broke with Emmeline's younger daughter, Sylvia, who worked with poor women in London's East End.

Eventually, in 1918, women over the age of 30 in Britain were given the vote and in 1928, a month after Emmeline Pankhurst's death, all women in Britain were given the same voting rights as men.
