

Since the beginning of the term, Rose and Paul have been sitting at the same desk. They're in ninth grade.

This morning, the teacher missed her train. She'll be arriving half an hour late. In the meantime, the students have to keep themselves busy.

Rose likes to play cards, Paul is writing an essay. In between, they chat about things.

"Hey, Paul, did you know that girls are smarter than boys?", Rose says.

Paul is astonished. "No, I didn't know that."

Smiling, Rose says: "See!"

term: semester
essay: composition, text
to chat: to talk smart: intelligent astonished: amazed, surprised

COMPARE:

Short adjectives: add -er
 Long adjectives: use more

FIRST	SECOND	ADJECTIVE	SENTENCE
Rose	Paul	smart	Rose is smarter than Paul.
my dog	your rabbit	intelligent	My dog is more intelligent than your rabbit.
Greenland	Iceland	large
cinema	school	exciting
a plane	a train	fast
gold	silver	expensive
the freezer	the fridge	cold
an alligator	an iguana	dangerous
your e-bike	my scooter	fast
Venus	Neptune	bright
safety	fun	important
dollars	rubles	popular
the Moon	Mars	near
Brad Pitt	Hansi	famous
a fox	a wolf	small
Boston	Pittsburgh	inviting	